

Paul Barclay Designs

The stunning images of the artist and illustrator Paul Barclay are familiar to many already, and whether things nautical float your boat or not it would be well nigh impossible to ignore a talent of such stature. Chances are that those new to his work will instantly fall in love with it.

His newest and arguably most high profile departure in a meteoric career is as naval and superyacht illustrator: this sees him producing fabulous pictures of frigates for their captains and signed prints for the crew, while he's cornering the market in stunning images of superyachts. Most recently Paul was in Monaco delivering his latest illustration of the world's fastest yacht, the Russian-owned 'The World is not Enough!'

Heady stuff, from the artist who works with apparently effortless ease and accuracy: unsurprising as his knowledge and understanding of boats derives from many years of hands-on experience. In essence his work is often about what is suggested or seems left out yet in implication is powerfully present.

Even though Paul's studio is based in Dartmouth much of his work involves international clients. He also runs a highly successful up and coming yacht brand, his own label and fascinating in house studio in Dartmouth, 'Nautical Voyages.'
